RUN NO 4 : BEN GEORGE

Your Scribe and 80% of the Pack arrived at the wrong starting point! One could feel the panic rising when it was realised that the beer wagon was missing! Ken Reardon with his well developed 'nose' was despatched to sniff out the beer and returned minutes later to lead the pack in their cars to the correct starting point.

The Pack set off five minutes late to try and catch our Hare who had set off fifteen minutes earlier. Ben had promised anybody who could catch him before he returned to the cars, a free six-pack of beer. With this incentive, the front runners set off at a cracking pace but were soon in trouble having run onto paper laid on a previous run.

The clever use of checks and the odd false trail kept the Pack together well, but things started to look quite desperate for our less fitter runners when trail led up a miniature Polly's Shorts! By the time the Pack had galloped down the other side of the hill, the back markers were some fair distance behind the main body. Ben obviously anticipated this and again with the use of two cunning falsies, got the Pack together for a well placed down-hill run-in. Needless to say, our Hare was not caught although he admitted to me afterwards that on one occasion, the Pack came very close! A few well-earned 'frosties' followed and for those who stayed, a bit of a sing-song with our star of the Welsh Bisteddfod Celfyn Thomas, followed!

Hero of the week : 'On-Guard' Tony Dixon (but what about all the beers he drank while we were running??!!)

HASH TRASH :

Church of England ordinary mortal to Roman Catholic Hashman : "How is it that I'm allowed to practice birth control and have nine kids, and you cannot use birth control and have no kids?"

Roman Catholic Hashman : "Well, I use the safe period."

Church of England ordinary mortal : "When is that?"

Roman Catholic Hashman : "When you're at work."
