Run No 20 : Trevor McWade (assisted by Terry Fox?? and John Parton)

Here we were, happily running through the cane at a reasonable pace, not getting dirty, enjoying the fresh air and thinking "What's happened to McWade?" In fact, for the first forty minutes of this run, it was a sheer pleasure! The area itself is well-known to the experienced Hashman. Trevor managed to take us along one or two new paths and the area around the Huletts Dam was particularly picturesque. Add to this an abundance of paper, a goodly number of false trails to keep the pack together, and you have a very enjoyable run - that is, until the McWade sadistic streak manifests itself!

Yes there we were, really enjoying a cool evening's run, and then - THE BLACK HOLE! The trail ended at a point where there were three paths - two going off into the cane and the third directed towards a tunnel underneath the ring road. Naturally, the front runners quickly dispersed into the cane, reasonably expecting the trail to bear away from the ring road. Notso Brian Orton. For some inexplicable reason, he ventured into the tunnel and to our horror, faint cries of ON-ON were transmitted back to us. We waited the customary few minutes (it just had to be a false trail). But no, the trail led into the tunnel and the blackness, slime and mud and on and on through the tunnel with no light in sight. One had to admire (in a perverse way) our Hare's courage in venturing into that tunnel in the first place. When daylight was eventually reached, we were forced to climb a barbed wire fence and then subjected to a gut-busting run-in. However, the sausage rolls, snacks and bitterly cold beers supplied by Co-Hare John Parton, soon had the Pack in a better frame of mind!
