RUN NO. 21 : Eric Smith and The Mouth

Jakarta, here we come! Anyone who survived this hash and apres-hash will find the hash jamboree in Burma a piece of old tacky. Thanks to Geoff Taylor who sign-posted, in his inimitable fashion, the road from Field's Hill to the start, the hash got under way 30 minutes late.

The tone for the run was immediately established - sadistically-set falsies with madman Smith actually leading the way. The trail lead across the Pinetown rugby field and up to the railway line which became the central feature of the run. The sections of the run set by Taylor were obvious - no paper was visible to the naked eye and without our usual trailblazers the pace tended to be leisurely with even the likes of Tony Dixon taking the lead. It became obvious that we were not to be spared the Jungles of Burma which had been looming over us and with John Pammenter in the lead we fought our way through bush and over rocks. The hare had, himself, actually got lost for a few hours when setting this section of the run - a situation in which many would have liked him to remain.

Once back at the Eric Smith holiday resort the main events of the evening began - swimming, curried crab, sports movies, curried crab, beers (local and imported, courtesy of Ken Reardon), curried crab, singing, Irish coffees, curried crab, wrestling, swimming, sauna and then the mind ceased to function.

In fact the two day hash was introduced and a fine thing it is too.

A superb evening, Eric.

ON ON John Becker

P.S. Geoff Taylor says he'll soon repair the sauna.

HASH TRASH:

How does one tell Dolly Parton's infant from any others?
By the stretch-marks round its mouth.
